

Special Days Camps Family Friday

Meet the Wiersma Family

Life with the Wiersma family hasn't always been a walk in the park between our daughter Mallory's diagnosis of childhood cancer and having two other daughters with autism. We've always struggled to find our community and support system. One thing that has been a glue for us is the incredible pediatric oncology community even years after her cancer diagnosis, Special Days Camp is just that, special.

Special days camp is a year around topic of conversation in our home. It is a place where each of our daughters can go that feels like a second home to them. It's a place that is magical to them. Every year my girls attend they come back with so much more than we sent them with (and I'm not just referencing the extra sand in the bottom of their luggage). They come back with pride, excitement, self confidence, and they keep that with them each and every day all year long.

Special Days Camp is more than just a camp, it's a village and that village we are beyond grateful for.
